Leak hits more students because of pattern shift
CBSE one-paper folly

BASANT KUMAR MOHANTY
New Delhi: All 20 lakh students would not have had to take the CBSE math and economics re-exam had the board apparently not deviated from its practice of different sets of question papers for different regions, a former chairperson said on Wednesday.
The former CBSE chairperson, who requested anonymity, told The Telegraph that the board seemed to have scrapped the norm of issuing multiple sets of question papers and opted for a composite question paper. As a result, the Class X math and Class XII economics exams, whose question papers were leaked in Delhi, will have to be held again for all students across India.
"It seems the CBSE has done away with the practice of multiple sets of question papers in the board examinations. Had they followed the practice, the number of affected students would have been confined to a few regions, and not the whole country," he said over phone.

Usually, the board prepares multiple sets of question papers and sends different sets to different regions.
It could not be confirmed whether the CBSE indeed did away with the practice. However, the board said students across India would have to take the re-exam. Calls and a text message to CBSE chairperson Anita Karwal and examination controller K.K. Choudhury remained unanswered.
Last year there had been a controversy over moderation of marks by different school boards. The moderation is done to compensate for the difficulty levels across sets of question papers and also to match the pass rate of the previous year. Under moderation, all students are awarded extra marks subject to a ceiling.

After being prodded by the human resource development ministry, all boards agreed to do away with moderation. The CBSE might have scrapped the multiple question set norm to rule out the possibility of varying difficulty levels, a justification for moderation, some believe.
The former CBSE chairperson said there could have been lapses in proper verification while allowing new centres to conduct the test. The background of the institutions where the exam centres have been set up and the safety preparedness must have been thoroughly verified, he said.

The All India Parents Association (AIPA), an organisation fighting for admission and the right to education of children, also suspected the revocation of multiple sets of question papers.
"The board has certainly adopted a single set of question papers. There is no other reason why students from the whole country have to take the test again," AIPA president Ashok Agrawal said.
Agrawal demanded that HRD minister Prakash Javadekar and CBSE chairperson Karwal resign by taking moral responsibility for the lapses.
"The answer papers in the revised tests should be evaluated liberally to compensate for the suffering of the students," Agrawal said.

IN BRIEF
Govt silent on Arihant 'repairs'

NEW DELHI: The government on Wednesday declined to give information on the extent of damage to or cost of repairs of the indigenously-built nuclear submarine INS Arihant, stating it could not be done "in the interest of national security". There were reports that the vessel had suffered major damage because of human error last year. In a written response in the Lok Sabha, Subhash Bhamre, junior defence minister, said: "The information cannot be divulged in the interest of national security." P11

Fishermen in net
AHMEDABAD: The Pakistan Maritime Security Agency on Wednesday apprehended nearly 24 Indian fishermen from Gujarat in the Arabian Sea, a fishing association official said. "We have learnt that around 24 fishermen, who set sail from Porbandar in Gujarat four days ago, were apprehended by the PMSA near the international maritime border," Manish Lodhari, secretary of National Fishworkers' Forum, said. Govt against creamy layer plea for SC/STs

OUR LEGAL CORRESPONDENT
New Delhi: The government on Wednesday said it wouldn't exclude the more affluent among Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes from reservation benefits, contending in the Supreme Court that the creamy layer concept for the Other Backward Classes couldn't be applied to these two communities.
Under this concept, the more well-to-do among OBCs can be denied quota benefits.
"This principle cannot be applied to the presidential order on quota for SC/STs. The government of India will not remove any creamy layer from among the SCs and STs from the purview of reservations," additional solicitor-general P.S. Narasimha told a bench of Chief Justice Dipak Misra and Justice A.M. Khanwilkar.
According to Article 341, the President can issue an order declaring certain castes/race/groups as SCs and STs.

The bench, which was dealing with a public interest plea, asked Narasimha to file an affidavit in support of his submission and posted the matter for further hearing to the second week of July.
The petitioner, Samta Andolan Samiti, a Rajasthan-based non-government organisation, had pleaded that the "creamy layer" concept adopted for OBCs should be extended to Dalit and tribal communities too.
Its argument was that in the absence of such a concept, the well-to-do among the SCs and STs were cornering all the quota benefits that should ideally belong to the downtrodden.
The NGO urged the top court to revisit an earlier judgment by a constitution bench in the Indra Sawhney case.
That bench had ruled that the creamy layer concept would apply only to OBCs.

NDA MPs ask Modi to shield Dalit rights

J.R. YADAV
New Delhi: A delegation of Dalit MPs of the ruling NDA led by minister Ram Vilas Paswan met Prime Minister Narendra Modi on Wednesday to urge the government to file a review petition in the Supreme Court against its order diluting the Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes (Prevention of Atrocities) Act.
The Prime Minister assured the MPs he would look into their demand but did not promise an appeal in the Supreme Court seeking a review of its March 20 order.
"We are examining the judgment. The law department will give its opinion and then we will take a call on filing a review petition," one of the MPs quoted Modi as saying.
Paswan said he was confident Modi would "leave no stone unturned to protect the rights of the Dalits".
"The Prime Minister heard us attentively. Being a part of the government we are confident it will intervene," he told reporters after the meeting in Parliament.

The meeting came against the backdrop of a virtual revolt by a Dalit MP of the BJP from Uttar Pradesh, Bahraich MP Savitri Bai Phule on Wednesday announced a rally in Lucknow on April 1 against what she said was a "conspiracy to end reservation".
"I have been regularly raising my voice in the Lok Sabha over issues linked to reservation provided to SCs, STs and the backward classes. Nothing seems to be happening though. Increasingly there are efforts to deny the benefits of reservation to the weaker sections. I feel there is a conspiracy to end reservation," Phule said.
The saffron-robed first-time MP said her move shouldn't be seen as a revolt against the BJP or the Modi government.

"As a follower of Babasaheb Ambedkar, I am doing my duty to protect the rights of the weaker sections. Reservation was granted by Ambedkar and no matter which party I represent, I will fight to protect it," Phule said. The rally has been titled Save Constitution, Save Reservation.
On Tuesday, junior HRD minister Upendra Kushwaha, an OBC leader from Bihar, wrote to the Prime Minister demanding his intervention to protect the rights of the Dalits and tribals.
A delegation of the National Commission for Scheduled Castes led by its chairman and BJP MP Ram Shankar Katharia called on President Ram Nath Kovind and sought his intervention in urging the government to file a review petition before the Supreme Court against its judgment.
Opposition parties led by the Congress also met the President to seek his immediate intervention.

Indian time for all clocks, via city firm

G.S. MUDUR
New Delhi: A Calcutta-based company has offered to help clocks across the country synchronise themselves precisely with the time generated by the National Physical Laboratory (NPL), a government centre designated as India's official measurements institution and time-keeper 62 years ago.
The New Delhi-based NPL and IFR Information Dissemination Services, Calcutta, on Wednesday signed a pact that both organisations are hoping will allow banks, electricity grids, railways, stock exchanges, and even personal computers to align themselves with NPL-generated time, also known as Indian Standard Time.
The company proposes to build two 800-metre towers — one in Madhya Pradesh and the other in Telangana — to disseminate the time signals to electronically controlled clocks across the country through a long wave radio frequency with a radius of reach of 1,000km.

The proposal, NPL scientists and project proponents say, is motivated by long-standing concerns that most clocks in India, including those embedded in computers, currently rely on time generated by the US National Institute of Standards and Technology (NIST).
"Synchronised clocks will yield huge economic and other benefits," said Dinesh Aswal, NPL director.
The benefits could span multiple applications — from railway reservations across the country to efficient power distribution across electricity grids to coordination of street and traffic lights.
The NPL was designated as India's official institution to maintain key measures, including time, in 1956. Its time signal, generated through atomic clocks, is available on its website.

Although the NPL already disseminates its time signal to key strategic user agencies, including the Indian Space Research Organisation, the Indian Air Force and Parliament, other agencies rely on NIST time.
As a result, Aswal said, clocks in desktop computers across India may be faster and slower than NPL time by seconds to over a minute.
"The non-uniformity of time across different systems can also obstruct cybercrime investigations because time stamps on two computers may not match," Aswal said.
"Out-of-alignment clocks may have little impact on personal computers, but become important in critical areas such as finance, stock exchange management, or railway reservations," said Pawan Kaseria, IFR's director, who studied economics and has worked in the telecommunications sector.

Law officer help on petition

OUR LEGAL CORRESPONDENT
New Delhi: The Supreme Court on Wednesday sought the assistance of the country's attorney-general on a petition seeking a directive to the Centre to ensure that a third category be incorporated in PAN card applications so that transgender people could file tax returns without any hitch.
The petitioner, filed by a social activist from Bihar, Reshma Prasad, said transgender people were finding it difficult to file returns because of the government's recent policy of making it mandatory to link PAN numbers with Aadhaar cards.
The petitioner said that while Aadhaar has a separate category for transgender people, there was no such provision in PAN application forms.
PAN cards are now issued only in the name of male/female applicants.
Prasad had earlier filed a petition in Patna High Court, which had dismissed the plea.
